Workspace means a common repository where invited parties have access to upload, view and download documents. It is created and managed by IP Australia. Access is only provided to parties that are participating in a specific proceeding. At the completion of the proceeding, the Workspace is closed.

Note: Workspace was previously called “Share.”

Part 2—Means and form for filing documents and evidence

5 Approved means of filing documents (including evidence in the form of a document)

- (1) A document, or evidence in the form of a document, that may or must be filed under the Act or the Regulations, is to be filed with the Designs Office using:
- (a) if the Registrar has given the person filing the document or evidence notice that a Workspace has been created for the matter in Objective Connect—Objective Connect; or
 - (b) if a notice has not been given under paragraph (a), or a notice has been given but it is not practicable to file the document or evidence using Objective Connect—a means specified by the Registrar in writing.

Note: The Registrar will typically create a Workspace for matters involving two parties, where either party has exercised its right to be heard. This includes, for example, third-party initiated examination of a registered design or an application for revocation of a design on the basis of entitlement.

- (2) Objective Connect is not an approved means for filing a document, or evidence in the form of a document, that is not covered by subsection (1).

Note: The means for filing a document other than a document covered by subsection (1) is set out in the Designs (Means of Filing Documents) Determination 2019.
