Amendments to a Trade Mark Application/Registration

Under s63 of the Trade Marks Act 1995 the Registrar may, at the request of the applicant or agent, amend an application for the registration of a trade mark in accordance with s64, 65 or 65A. The Registrar may also, at the request of the registered owner of a registered trade mark, amend particulars of a trade mark entered in the Register under s83. The rules for making amendments vary depending on whether you make them before or after the details of your application have been published. Particulars of an application are considered published when the details of the application are available on Australian Trade Mark Search. The Registrar will only consider the request if it is fair and reasonable to do so. For example, a request made a long time after filing your application might not be allowed. All amendments need to be considered carefully by the Registrar before they are granted in order to lessen the potential adverse impact of such an amendment on other parties. The Registrar may also require you to file a declaration in support of your request, and will conduct a search of Australian Trade Mark Search for marks that might become conflicting because of the proposed changes to your trade mark.

Section 63 Amendments

Amendments before publication (s64)

If the particulars of an application have not yet been published under section 30, it is possible to request amendment of the particulars contained in the application form to correct a clerical error or an obvious mistake. The timeframe for an amendment before publication is limited as details of an application are published on the same day as filed or within one business day.

Amendments after publication (s65 and s65A)

If the particulars of an application have been published, the application may be amended as provided for under s65 and s65A. Only minor changes to the representation that do not substantially affect the identity of the trade mark may be possible and it is difficult to add extra classes or goods and services that would extend the scope of the application as originally filed. An amendment which reduces the scope as originally filed, such as removing a class or deleting some of the goods and services may be allowed. S65A of the Act provides the Registrar with more scope, when it is fair and reasonable to do so to correct clerical errors or obvious mistakes in published applications not allowable under other parts of the Act. If the Registrar is satisfied that the request for amendment would be granted under s65A, it must be advertised in the Australian Official Journal of Trade Marks to give other parties an opportunity to oppose the amendment.

Section 83 Amendments

Amendments after registration

Amendments after registration can include:

- correction of an office error
- future reclassification of goods or services
- amendment to the registered trade mark as published (provided it does not affect the identity of the trade mark)
- amendment to the goods and/or services covered by the registration or any other particulars of the registration, provided that such amendments do not extend the rights the owner of the trade mark has in the registration.
- amendments to the certificate of registration, after an amendment has been made to the registered particulars of a trade mark.
